File 13, Korea: The Cynic Of the Front Line Foxhole

By Sgt. Al Martinez, Marine Correspondent.

WITH THE FIRST MARINE DIVISION IN KOREA (Delayed)—The snow and the wind whipped down across the forward slopes of ruggedly mountainous Korea. The sky was an iron sky, and the late evening bitterly cold. The rear echelon wondered how anyone could withstand the outside. And on the front, where the barbed wire grows thick, the cynic in the foxhole wonders the same thing. He's the infantry. He's the gentleman of the front lines who sleeps with his helmet on, a round in the chamber of his M-1, and his sleeping bag open. A realist, he. A loud advocate of a black-and-white philosophy, based on the snap of a grenade primer, or the angry click of a bolt.

He's a joker. The guys who listens to the Gooks holler at him in a banzai attack, and when they holler "All Marines from Georgia go home!" he hollers back, "How about Texas?" A real comic, tabbing the new replacements as stump killers when they get jumpy and fire at slant-eyed shadows and Chinese twigs. He can laugh at almost anything from his 15th can of corned hash, to men scattering like ants when he hollers incoming mail and delivers a few letters. . . . But he laughs the loudest when the outfit is relieved on the lines and he's wondering why the guys who were killed the day before couldn't have held on for just a little longer, but it's a different laugh. And you know he's a joker, a real clown . . .

The Marine rifleman is probably the world's best disciplined combatant. And on the front lines, he stands alone in following a combat order. But tell him to go down the hill and fill the canteens for the squad—he'll look at you like you're crazy. So it's insubordination if he flatly says he isn't going to go. So? "Whadda ya gonna do," he grins sarcastically to a flabbergasted officer, "send me to Korea?" In one respect anyhow, he's got the world by the tail.

"Call me anything you want," an officer will order, "but when we're on the front lines, don't call me lieutenant." So the grinning rifleman hollers to his platoon leader, "Hey, Skinny." The officer, equally up to the occasion, turns and bites off, "Mr. Skinny to you." And Pvt. Joe, he's met his match . . .

Maybe you think that this unshaven, always tired, cynical Marine never has his moments of deep thought or memory. No man is more alive in his thoughts and memories than the combat Marine. And because mental projection is his closest association with home, his thoughts are always active. And before each "jump off," before each assault, his thoughts are most alive. "Because," he mutters, "it may be my last thought, and I want it to be good." A sentimentalist? Yes. He's crying his heart out . . .

The best way to picture the foot slogger is to look at the guy next to you, give him a beard, dress him in dungarees, hand him an M-1 and tell him he's going into the attack. His reaction will be the same as the Marine's over here: "You're crazier than hell."

The only difference is, the Marine over here knows you're not.

French Government Offers Study, Teaching Grants to College Grads

Approximately 80 grants are being offered by the French government to American college students for study or teaching in France next year, the Institute of International Education announced recently.

Forty of these grants are for teaching conversational English for one year in a French school. These "asistants d'anglais" live at the lycee or ecoles normales d'institeurs to which they are assigned. The grants will provide from 22,000 to 27,000 francs a month during the academic year. Applicants for an assistantship must be unmarried, have a good knowledge of French, and have a bachelor's degree from an American college.

The French government is also offering 35 fellowships to Americans for graduate study in France. The fellowships, which are open to students in all fields of study, provide tuition and 20,000 francs a month. The requirements are the same as for the assistantships.

Four special scholarships for the study of art and music in Paris are also being offered through the Institute by the Woolley Foundation. Each scholarship will provide a grant of $1,000, and provides that the student will live at the Foundation des Etats-uis of the Cite Universitaire. Eligibility requirements include graduation from an American college or professional school, good knowledge of French, and capacity for independent study in music or art.

A number of travel grants from the U. S. government to cover transportation costs for recipients of these grants will be open under the Fulbright Act. Completed applications must be filed by February 15, 1952, with the U. S. Student Program, Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th Street, New York 19, New York.

KRTG Radio-TV Guild Launches New Programs

KRTG, Radio-TV Guild launched a new, long-range program aimed towards better radio and television for S. F. State, at a meeting held last Thursday.

Larry A. Russell, retiring program director of the Guild, said that radio functions on the new campus, with facilities second to none on the coast, would compare favorably with those offered by any college or university in the country.

"Already one KRTG production (Christ of The Andes) has been heard over a principle Bay Area station," (KCBS) Russell said, "along with our series being broadcast at Hanford, and the upcoming series slated to be aired at Marysville and Mount Shasta. By the time we move, Central and Northern California should be fairly blanketed with productions from S. F. State college."

New members of the board, elected at the meeting, were: Carl Switzer, program manager; Barry Simmons, production director; Dean Berg, chief announcer, and Mark Goldes, educational director. Luree LaMarr retained her post as secretary.

Dance Class Needs Girls

Out! harrow! and weylaway!

The class for the social dance which is currently crying that it needs girls apparently has an overpopulation of men and so it is urged that available women enlist in the Tuesday - Thursday P. E. class, which meets from 3:30 till 4:30, and balance the enrollment so there is a large class and so that the state of California will not feel it is making a poor monetary investment.

Senior Photos For Paper-Bound Annual to Be Taken February 5

Plans for a 32-page yearbook, containing pictures of graduating seniors and of campus activities, were revealed by Dick Sperisen, senior class president, at a special class meeting, attended by nearly 300 seniors, held last Friday morning at 8:30 in Temple Beth Israel. The annual, which will be titled Senior Book, wil be limited to a 500 copy edition, and will be sold for $1.

Senior Book is being presented as a substitute for the defunct Franciscan, traditional yearbook, which has not been published since 1950. Original plans for reviving the Franciscan this semester were abandoned by the editorial board last week because of a lack of both competent staff and funds.

$350 ESTIMATE

The paper-bound Senior Book will be printed on glossy paper, and measure 8 by 11 inches; the publication will cost the senior class an estimated $350.

Pictures of graduating seniors will be taken during registration for the coming spring semester. Students graduating with the current class should contact Sperisen immediately if they wish to have their pictures included in the book. Each senior who is photographed will be charged 15 cents; seniors may order regular size prints of the pictures from the photographer.

STAFF NEEDS WORKERS

Sperisen stressed that staff members are still needed for the project, and that all people interested in working on the book should contact him or other senior class officers through either P. O. Box 255 or the senior class mailbox in Hut 4A. Sperisen stated since the book will attempt to cover all class and on-campus activities, people from all classes are wanted.

GROUP PICTURES

Groups, including sororities and fraternities, may have their pictures included in the book for a nominal fee. Interested organizations should contact Sperisen immediately about submitting the photos.

Snapshots or candids of campus affairs should be submitted to the senior class immediately.

Publication date for the book has been tentatively set for late May.

Language Arts Adds Three New Spring Courses

Three new courses will be added to the Language Arts division next semester, Dr. Caroline Shrodes, department chairman, announced yesterday. They are English 101, Journalism 150 and English 138-238.

English 101 (10MWF) is a three unit course in critical writing. According to a Language Arts release, the course is "designed to stimulate clear, accurate critical thinking and expression." The course will be taught by Dr. Fredrik Feltham.

In the journalism course (12WF, two units), practice will be given in writing feature articles, news articles, editorials and critical reviews of a type suitable for publication. Advanced journalism is designed for upper division students, although lower division students may be admitted by permission of the instructor, Donald Biggs.

English 138-238 (2:00-3:25 MTh, 3 units) is a course in linguistics. The new course, A Seminar in the History of Anglo-Saxon and Middle English language and literature, "emphasizes upon those aspects important to a better understanding and finer appreciation of modern language." The course is open to graduate students, upper classmen and lower classmen who obtain permission of Mr. Lowell Kindschi, now completing his doctorate at Stanford in English language history.

A MINISTER TELLS OF THE PACIFIC'S 'DEVIL'S ISLAND'

"Rock" Is Post Graduate School For Criminals

BY DAVE COHEN

"Devil's Island—U. S. A." was the theme of Mr. William Winkleman's informal talk at the last meeting of the semester of the Humanities club.

The bespectacled Winkleman told of the life on the "Rock" as he knows it . . . through the eyes of a Protestant Minister. He serves on the administrative board of the prison and as the representative for the Protestant clergy on the island.

"POST GRAD SCHOOL"

Winkleman narrated that Alcatraz is a "post graduate school" for the inmates. It isn't very often that prisoners are sent directly there; they are sent to Alcatraz generally for one of two reasons: One, great escape possibilities at less isolated prisons because of the length of the sentence and two, the uncontrollable attitude exhibited by the prisoner at other prisons.

Great homicidal and suicidal tendencies on the part of the inmates necessitate extreme caution by the officials to prevent such happenings. In the center of each cell is a wooden block. Prior to shaving, a guard walks down the corridor with a large board on which is attached the prisoner's razor with his cell number on it and when the razors are collected the numbers must match or there is an immediate check made.

NO CELL MATES

There are no cell mates at Alcatraz. Each man has his own cell. The cell, about 45 feet square has a bunk, which must be made in the morning, a wash basin and a flush toilet.

About the only privilege afforded the prisoners is a show once in two weeks. No newspapers are permitted on the island because the officials feel that it is better if the prisoners fall behind on their reading of crime. All magazines and books coming to the island are heavily censored for the same reason. All prisoners, even those in solitary confinement, are given at least one hour a day exercise in the yard. In the yard, congregation of more than four prisoners are not allowed. Because cards are not allowed, the prisoners play bridge with dominoes.

ISLAND STIGMA

The stigma attached to a man who has served time at Alcatraz is so great that the parole board tries to see to it that he is not released from there. Shortly before his time is up, he is sent to a prison near his home and paroled from there.

On the corrective side of the ledger, the prison tries to foster some artistry. One prominent artist a month comes to the island to give lectures. Some of the inmates have developed great capacities along this line and many of their pictures have hung in "Rickey's" Town House on Van Ness avenue. When the pictures are sold, the inmates have been known to donate part of their money to the needy of Europe. The other half of the money goes to their welfare fund.

OLD TIME RELIGION

As a general rule, the prisoners have had so much religion in their past that they now reject it or on the other hand they have little conception of what is meant by religion. Mr. Winkleman introduced a bit of levity to his story by telling that the inmates have a tendency to swing old hymns.

A few prisoners take advantage of the opportunity to gain an education by using the 2700 book library or by taking courses from the University of California extension. But Mr. Winkleman added that these men are too few in number.

MONEY USELESS

Money is practically valueless on the island. A man's tobacco, shaving needs, etc., are furnished by the government. However, by working in one of the various industries on the island, he can earn up to $60 a month and also lessen his sentence by two to four days per month. Working is not compulsory. But of the 243 inmates on the island at the present time, only about 15 do not work. They refuse to work perhaps, because they resent the government that put them there. To the prisoner's way of thinking, working is bad enough, but to work for the government is a crime.

The law governing Alcatraz states that not less than 200 and no more than 300 prisoners shall be on the island.

BIGGEST PROBLEM

The biggest problem of rehabilitation for these men is gaining their confidence. Once that has been gained, to help them solve their problems, however, because of the caliber of men coming to the island, this is most difficult. Most of the men are resentful of anyone who tries to help them. Many of them don't want help.

Mr. Winkleman was active in the drama department here prior to his appointment to the board at Altraz and his name is not a strange one to many State students.

He closed his lecture by saying, "I hope I don't see any of you after March 15th."

Duggan Paces Gators' Sweep Over Fresnans

SPRING SPORTS

Baseball Workouts Start; Signups, Uniforms Issued

With Spring in the air at last, despite soggy fields and collapsed backstops, Coach Dick Boyle last week issued a call for baseball players, with informal practice set for Monday, February 4, at 4 o'clock p.m. on the new campus field.

Uniforms will be issued any time after January 21 from Mr. York in the equipment room. All baseball men should arrange their program so they will be able to practice from 4 o'clock to 5:30 p.m.

With the Gators' prime weakness in the pitching department, all freshmen and transfers are urged to try out for the varsity.

Swimming Hopefuls Tune Up in Recreation Swim

All swimmers interested in limbering up for team practice, which begins in earnest with the start of the spring semester, are urged by swimming coach Hal Harden to work out during the two-hour period of recreational swimming during finals week.

Sign-ups for intercollegiate swimming will be held after the start of the spring semester, announced Harden today.

Late State Rallies Stop Fresno After Bulldogs Twice Blow Lead

The high-flying Gator basketballers swept a two-night series with a vengeful Fresno State quintet last weekend at the new campus gym. The S. F.'ers shot past the flashily-clad Bulldogs on Friday night after a fourth quarter deadlock to post an impressive 63 to 52 win. Again on Saturday night the Gators had to fight from behind to overcome the fighting Fresnans by a last-minute freeze, 61 to 54.

On both evenings Kevin Duggan was the prime factor in subduing the southlanders. Twice he went wild in the fourth quarter to break up the previously tight ball games.

WRONG BUCKET

The tense fans from Fresno and S. F. alike had to laugh Saturday night when the Bulldogs' chunky Ken Bartels, after being heavily guarded by Vic Gipson, potted a beauty—in the Fresno basket. He had tried the same mixed-up play once before, but missed.

With the score tied up on Friday night, 42-42, going into the final period after a close, hard-fought battle throughout the first few quarters, Kevin Duggan hit for 10 points as Fresno, once behind, threw the ball away in as many ways as possible. Duggan scored 24 points.

TEMPORARY LEAD

The night after, Fresno went into the final frame with a four-point lead. State pulled up to a one-point deficit, but there all progress stopped.

The ball was thrown to Duggan on the sidelines, where, poised and hesitant, he held onto his advantageous position, but couldn't spot a man in a better one. After the spectators started yelling at him to do something, he fell back and fired a beauty that broke up the game.

Thereafter the Gators pulled a highly successful and time-eating stall that brought the Fresnans out so far that Alex Athanasopoulos was shaken loose for an incredible lay-in from the key. Two foul shots by Duggan and a twisting, underhand lay-up by Duggan iced the game for good.

SHARP GATORS

Al Desin and Gly Mayfield were the key men in the Gators' second quarter drive that pulled them out of a one-time 25-12 Fresno lead on Saturday.

Fresno started well on both nights, especially the latter evening, and looked unbeatable with well-developed post plays, hook shots, and block-and-roll-off plays. Later in the game the only consistent bucket for the Bulldogs was a short jump shot from the key.—LL

JVs Ramble Over A8S, Jefferson

The JVs added two more wins to their already impressive record this weekend, scoring victories over Alpha Zeta Sigma, frat champs and intramural runners-up by a score of 50-36, and Jefferson High school 49-30 on the following night.

The regularly scheduled game against Yuba JC Friday night fell through when the Yubans were struck with illness at the last minute. George Wehner, versatile JV football end and basketball center from St. Mary's, led scoring with 11 points on a variety of shots. Dick Boyd and Ken Kashavaroff of AZS followed closely with 10 points each.

Saturday night also found the JVs clearing the bench and using 17 men to ramble over the inept Jeffs. Ron Marenda and Wehner were high scorers with 10 points and were followed by Ralph Yakushi's nine markers.

Army Enlistments Open

Young men may still enlist in the Army or Air Force even though they have had their preinduction physical examination, according to Lt. Col. Ray O. Busch of the Army and Air Force Recruiting service at 30 Van Ness avenue. They must enlist before they have received their actual induction notice, however.

"In the past," Col. Busch stated, "many men wait too long and find that their selective service board has issued an induction notice for them. The solution is to apply for enlistment immediately, while there is still an opportunity to choose."
